

“Of all the things we did for our business, among the best was giving away $100,000.”

*– Michael Bradford
General Manager, Audi Beverly Hills*

In just a few years, Audi Beverly Hills has grown to become the largest Audi dealership in the country.

According to Michael Bradford, General Manager of the dealership, donating to the Beverly Hills Education Foundation (BHEF) had a lot to do with it.

“We have contributed a significant amount of time and money to the BHEF,” says Michael. “The tangible and intangible returns have been overwhelmingly positive.”

Could your business benefit from a partnership with the BHEF? As part of our 2016 “Funding Our Future” initiative, we’re making available sponsorship and naming opportunities at each of our five district schools. It’s a smart way to promote your business and connect to a community of thousands of local parents and kids each year.

The BHEF will certainly benefit from a partnership with you. Thanks to the generous contributions of local business owners, the BHEF has been able to support Arts, STEM, Athletics and Robotics programs at all of the schools in our district.

Support the BHEF. It’s good for our city, good for our kids, and good for you.
